If you have been part of the SIU campus community, you may have already and will continue to notice changes to the way you sign in to SIU software and systems. Where you once used your Network ID as your username, you will now sign on using your SIU email address (both in combination with your password). Eventually signing in using your email address will be the standard, but during the transition period you may run into one of two sign-in windows. Simply enter the information requested.

Smaller systems have already been converted to the new sign-in method. Larger systems like D2L, Outlook 365, and SalukiNet are scheduled to be transitioned to the new system starting in early August 2020.

As we make this transition, more systems will become “single sign-on,” meaning you will enter your credential one time for access to multiple systems. We also recommend that you take this opportunity to sign up for multi-factor authentication—both security precautions.

The easiest way to know if a system has been transitioned from our old system to the new sign-in protocol is by looking at the sign-in pop-up window.
